The Vedas, a precious inheritance that gives India the status of a teacher among nations, are four in number: Rig Veda, Yajur Veda, Sama Veda, and Atharva Veda. Great teachers from Veda Vyasa to AdiShankara say that the Vedas are a pathway to the realisation of the Lord. Among the four Vedas, Atharva is the Veda that deals with protection. The protection of nature, of agriculture, of the environment, against physical and mental ills, of the country itself, are dealt with by the Atharva Veda. Ayurveda, a part of the Indian way of life, originated from the Atharva Veda.

The Atharva Veda speaks of a number of medicinal plants and their uses. Some of the rituals prescribed in the Atharva Veda have been performed for centuries, and show us that at certain junctures, medicines and herbs were offered for the propitiation of gods. When the power of medicines and of nature against pestilences and diseases weaken, illnesses enter human life, and the balance of nature is lost.

The Atharva Veda BhaishajyaYajnautilises the power of medicinal plants as prescribed in the Veda. These rare medicinal plants and herbs are offered to agni to propitiate the gods. Bhesham is a term meaning 'diseases.' Bheshajam is 'that which overcomes diseases.' It is for this that the BhaishajyaYajna is performed, using the chants laid down in the Atharva Veda. We most cordially invite you to be a part of Atharva Veda Bhaishajya Yajnam that is happening with in our serene campus.
